

July 1 2014

We're on the lookout for qualified Nurses and Health Care Assistants to work in our busy community hospitals.

Whether you are an existing nurse looking for a career change or if you've left nursing for whatever reason, but love the profession and would consider coming back, we'd like to hear from you!

Our community hospitals are located in Ross-on-Wye, Bromyard and Leominster. While the core services provided at each hospital is the same, each hospital is distinctly different as they meet the healthcare needs of their local communities.

Most of our patients come from Herefordshire itself, but as these hospitals are close to the county borders, we also care for people who do not live in Herefordshire.

No days are ever the same for our multi-disciplinary teams who care for patients either following transfers from Hereford County Hospital, or direct admissions to the community hospital, and staff work closely with patients and relatives to support them as they get ready to go home.

We are justifiably proud of the healthcare services we offer local people – all our community hospitals perform well and regularly receive high ratings in the recently-introduced Friends and Family Test.

So, if you're a qualified Nurse or Health Care Assistant who would like to work in one of our community hospitals, please get in touch.

We're holding drop-in sessions at each of the hospitals from 4pm to 7pm on Wednesday, July 16.

If you can make it, please try and call in for a chat and to find out what's it's like working in one of our community hospitals.

Alternatively, you can contact the hospitals directly for further information:
